

What options were examined?

Many locations were studied and preference was given to property owned by the Diocese. Different locations within the Sudbury region were examined and given careful analysis. Parishes which could benefit from having the offices of the Diocesan Centre at their location were given precedence. After reviewing many options, Holy Redeemer Rectory was selected as the new location for the Diocesan Centre.

Why do we need to relocate the Diocesan Centre?

The present location of the Diocesan Centre is no longer feasible. Ever since the Diocese began leasing at the present location (30 Ste. Anne Road), plans to move were undertaken. The time to vacate the present location has now become necessary.

Why relocate to Holy Redeemer parish in Sudbury?

The rectory of Holy Redeemer parish was deemed the most feasible location for the move. It is by far the most economic prospect. To retrofit the building in order to accommodate the parish offices and amenities on one side and the offices of the Diocesan Centre, requires minimal renovations. The Pastor of Holy Redeemer parish was offered suitable accommodations in order to convert the whole rectory into offices.

Things in the life of the Diocese have changed

Financially the diocese is facing significant fiscal pressures. The Diocese is challenged on many levels in today's times: operationally, capital investment in parishes, repair needs, secularization, and a new church profile with a greater mosaic of clergy and faithful.

This reality calls for a new response requiring a humble approach and a continued commitment to innovative daily processes.

When will the move take place?

Renovations are set to begin during the summer of 2023. The date of the official opening of the Diocesan Centre at the new location at Holy Redeemer in Sudbury, will be communicated as soon as it becomes available. The target date is early fall of 2023.
